Creating and maintaining this data was a key undertaking, and it required the development of unique tools, including a custom-built motion capture rig that was designed to capture accurate, high-accuracy data for optimal use in FIFA, and was the first of its kind in the gaming industry, according to Mastertronic. The new game engine also supports the introduction of a number of core new features, including the Player Impact Engine, a major new feature that analyses ball movement, defensive movements, player positions, and the impact of the ball on players, and then automatically adapts to deliver the correct deceleration effect when a player is close to or collides with another player. Players can physically influence the ball differently and in a wider range of ways, creating gameplay dynamics that are more authentic and authentic than ever before. In addition, the Player Impact Engine applies physics to the ball in an intelligent and yet fair way, ensuring it plays realistically on the field. The Player Impact Engine has the ability to recognise the player's action, and how much force they are applying to the ball, and adaptively react to their actions based on "intelligent data" collected from the match. Another feature to enhance the game's overall realism is the Impact Aerodynamics Engine, which uses data captured during the game to calculate how the force of the player's actions – making a tackle, controlling the ball, shooting from a free-kick and so on – changes the speed and trajectory of the ball. The new physics engine improves the real feeling of the ball's direction and trajectory. Finally, there's the AI engine, which delivers variable and intelligent attack and pressing strategies. The AI system now combines depth and vision to create a tactical system that responds to every situation, both real and imaginary, offering players a variety of game-changing options. For example, the new AI system can see and respond to a number of hazards and unbalance a team using movement, positioning, shooting, approach strategies and off-ball movements. The game engine is AI-enabled, allowing for intelligent and intelligent systems that will react to a player's actions and react to other players moving in a similar way. The 2K Sports engine is the centre of the game's digital design where the engine provides the foundation for all the game's features
